The Smile Is Not Enough

scrap the export levy is another example of how the whole anti-inflation program was thrown together in haste with little thought for the future. Under terms of the proposed export tax levy, companies covered by wage and price guidelines were allowed profits on export sales of only 95 per cent of their average profit over the previous five years. Excess profits would have been subject to the new tax: although rebates could be offered if profits were reinvested in approved projects within Canada.

The export tax had been proposed with good intentions. Theoretically it would have kept the price of Canadian products down on international markets. Conversely it would not have allowed exporting businesses to escape restraints imposed on companies selling on domestic markets. Then provincial governments and crownowned utilities began borrowing huge amounts on international markets, driving the price of the Canadian dollar up abroad. A world-wide recession saw Canada drop from a $2 billion trade surplus in 1972 to a meagre $472 million surplus in 1974 and a predicted $5 billion loss in 1975. Clearly, it home to bid up a scarce supply. Nor Cyclical industries such as British Columbia's logging and mining industries were particularly hard hit. It would appear that provincial lobbying, especially from B.C. and Alberta, played a large part in scrapping the proposed law. At the same time removing this cog from the AIB wheel results in new inequities. Employees of large export firms have their there is no control on company profits earned from export trade. Other companies, perhaps divisions of the same companies, will find different sets of rules applying to sales depending on whether the product is sold at home or abroad. Canadian customers may end up paying world prices for some commodities, such as copper which is not controlled. In other cases domestic shortages may occur because companies can reap larger profits on international markets. One doesn't need a crystal ball to see the potential here for horrendous domestic inflation. Raw and manufactured products will automatically be diverted to the higher priced international market, leaving the folks at grin. It is beginning to look very lob-

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said the government would take action to stop the diversion of goods. However, this would entail the unusual step of putting quotas on all exports. This would damage Canada's international trade even further, leaving an impression abroad that Canasalaries limited by federal law, while adian supplies were subject to political

> As ridiculous as it reads, the Anti Inflation Board is in the position of encouraging a policy that has a strong potential of furthering inflation. If the export levy tax had stood, some province's notably our own might not have signed up with the federal guidelines. Ottawa has chosen what it considers the lesser of two evils. No matter what the exceptions, rule changes or flip flops, it is the wage earner who continues to pay the price. We have been waiting for more than six months to see the price controls in place. Instead, the only thing that remains in place is Jean Luc Pepin's

Last Saturday's city byelection ran true to form, adding another businessman to the tight little board of directors who control the city. Business expertise is necessary on any council. One must always add that obligatory little sentence, because the intertwining of business and all levels of government has become something of a North American shibboleth. In truth we can't say what a council of labor union types or philosophers, or teachers might be like because none

Of course, a uniform council wouldn't be a healthy thing, would it? All those labor union people, all those some strange paths. What we need is a diversified vigorous council reflecting the concerns of this community. Rhetoric and reality don't match. First of all there's the mayor, a lawyer. Running down the aldermanic list, we find a retired army colonel. The rest are businessmen. Robert Ellis is a developer, Ron Mackenzie owns an office supply outfit; Bob Wright owns a large scale tourist attraction, Helen Biernes is a former chamber of commerce president, Murray Glazier, a consulting engineer; Bill Tindall, manager of the Better Business Bureau which is paid for by the subscriptions of local business, and now John Hayes, a

Oak Bay and Beach Drive each account for two more alderpersons. Another lives in Uplands. Where are the people representing Fairfield or James Bay? It must be said: Victoria city council is largely controlled by business people who live in the wealthier areas of the city. No wonder Bob Wright is shocked when he spends an evening with the Victoria city police on the street. A social, cultural and occupational bias is within all of us. That is why we all pay so much lip service to diversified elected bodies in our democratic rhetoric.

Yet lip service it remains. Victoria city council is a living example to that. This is not meant to disparage the excellent talents that exist among our city councillors. It is simply a matter of stating an obvious fact the city's government is not representative of its people. That alone should make us stop and think before the next municipal election roles along. With so many potential conflicts of interest over land deals, the day may come when this council couldn't summon a quorum to vote on an issue.

Media Mob Much Maligned

OTTAWA — The applause started in his own section but instantly thundered right around the hall.

The Liberals invented Pierre Trudeau," declared Heward Grafftey, the engaging elfin Quebec MP. A pause for effect. A fist banged down on to the podium for punctuation, "And the CBC

Among delegates to the Conservative leadership convention, media-bashing almost was as popular as Trudeau-knocking.

"Witless bastards," "Vultures," "freaks," delegates said to each other about the media mobs—until they noticed me standing, head cocked close behind. "Have you no decency?" Bennett Horner shouted at the reporters who enveloped his brother Jack Horner while he tried to make his agonizing, and in its result, courageous, decision to cast his western support to Quebecker Claude Wagner.

It's Anti-French

These sentiments, if expressed more honestly than is common, are not new. are they misplaced. Television warped the convention into its own image. Polls reported by CBC and by CTV ar earlier, by Toronto Star, for example may have cost Brian Mulroney chances. They made him, inaccurately as events proved, seem to be the front-runner and so the target for all of the other can-

The difference, which Grafftey and Bennett Horner and the delegates could not recognize because, like fish in water they were part of it, was that the convention itself was neither a political event nor a televised reflection of that event, but a hybrid, tele-political event. A "pseudo-environment" to use the phrase coined by the later Walter Lippman, in which media and politics fuse to invent each other and

In a pseudo-environment, the abnormal comes the normal. After his victory, Clark went, as do all new leaders, imterviewed. There, a first as much in jour-nalism as in politics, Clark was questioned by the CBC's convention commentators: John Bassett, an ex-Conservative candidate and party bigwig and Eddie Goodman, former party national president and, during the time he was outside the booth, a key worker for rival candidate Flora MacDonald.

The Medium created its own political messages. As a relief from interviewing delegates, CBC star Larry Zolf interviewed CBC star Charlotte Gobiel. She told him that Mulroney had told her he opposed "gang-bags." The message created their own medium. In his set speech, candidate Paul Hellyer also took a swipe at the press. The next day, ex-candidate Hellyer returned to the parliamentary press gallery to resume his career as columnist Hellyer.

It does contain infinite possibilities.

Clark, a pragmatic politician and a former journalist, understands the phenomenon perfectly. Would he have dificulties because he was completely unknown, a reporter asked after his victory?

'You fellows work on the star tem," Clark answered with a shrug. You paid no attention to me as an MP Publicity, and notoriety perhaps, come automatically to whoever is opposition

Clark is absolutely right. Within a few weeks he will be as well-known to Canadians as was Robert Stanfield after eight television-blighted years on the job. Media magic already envelopes Clark's wife Maureen, though she in fact has the substance of an extraordinarily poised and clear minded 23-year-old.

Tele-politics, mind you, encompas more than just television and politics. The print media swim inside the same pseudo

After the second ballot, a reporter for a medium-sized daily newspaper hurried past me out of the hall. "I think Clark's going to make it," he explained. Recent graduation of practical nurses at Camosun College.

Nursing Education

The Times of Feb. 23, is quoted as saying, "1976 is to be a lean year for nurses looking for employment in the Victoria area." Well, let's hope that it won't be a lean year for continuing nursing education.

The University of Victoria has, since 1966, been trying to establish a faculty of nursing. To date, the university has hired a director, Dr. Isabel MacCrae who. together with a nursing consultant, has been setting up a curriculum, planning the courses and screening over 125 applica-tions for the 40 first-year places. All that is needed is sufficient funds to begin hiring nursing faculty and to cover operating ex-

In conclusion, if you feel that the interest, and the willingness to sacrifice dol-lars and time, generated by the nursing community for the benefit of society as a whole, are any criterion in determining whether such a program shoud be funded, we urge you to write without delay to Dr. Pat McGeer, Minister of Education, Parliament Buildings, Victoria, B.C., or to port Avenue, Barbara Smith, 644 Island Road.

Split Infinitives

In Town Talk of Feb. 24, there was an article about international friendship week, which is being sponsored by the Universal Esperanto Association.

Contrary to the article, Dr. Zamenhof was not a "Russian Physicist." He was born in Poland and lived most of his life there. He was at a university in Moscow for a period of about two years pursuing his medical studies. He was not a physicist. After graduating as a medical doctor, he served in that capacity for a short time and then went on to take training so that he could practice as an oculist.

The remark about the split infinitive is puzzling: Perrin and Gowers, to mention two authorities, both favor the split infinitive when it makes the sense clearer "to ever uphold" what would the writer of Town Talk say? "Ever to up-hold" sounds stuffed shirt and pedantic and "to uphold ever" doesn't seem to be a normal English expression.

Incidentally, the writer refers to esperanto as "this lingo." Surely this is a derogatory term for an international language spoken by several millions of people from all continents of the world. — Maurice Tozer, Sooke.

Union Greed

The first time I ever attended a labor meeting was in Saskatoon during the 1930s. The meeting was called to try and get a number of labor unions organized, such as miners, carpenters, bricklayers. The people in attendance were of many and varied political persuasion and national origins. They were all there for the one common purpose - to obtain a de-

Today unionized labor has gained raises in pay that stagger the imagination and have gone from a mere 20 cents an hour to the not uncommon figure of $12 an hour. This has to be an ego trip of unprecedented proportions. Organized labor has become powerful but their power is not matched by a social conscience. No consideration has been given by organized labor to unorganized workers, the un-employed, the unemployable, pensioners, aged widows or the handicapped.

The leaders of organized labor have failed dismally in their mission and responsiblity to society, mostly because prehend what is in the interests of our na tion and its people, or what is best for labor in the long run. Only an idiot believes that we can continue to have a spiralling inflation without ultimate dis-aster. Organized labor has done nothing to try and help achieve an equitable inc for all Canadians, even though it has the power to force the issue. At this critical time while our elected leaders are trying to do something about the economy, we find organized labor acting like ignorant boors. There surely mbers of our unions who us their heads for reasons other than to hold their ears apart. The labor movement is werful enough to force a hold on prices and wages, and if they wanted to could force a roll back of both. All that is necessary is leadership and a will to succeed. Si Poth, Chilliwack, B.C.

Divided House?

I followed with some interest the proceedings of the recent Progressive

During the final stage of the voting I was of the opinion that perhaps a young and apparently vigorous leader such as Joseph Clark might assist in binding together what, for some considerable period of time has been a somewhat divided party, into a cohesive force which could tend to overthrow the present Liberal administration. However, it appeared to me that Clark's fervent appeal for unity in his acceptance address was falling on deaf ears in some quarters and that the convention closed on a somewhat discordant level, also that nothing was further from the minds of some of the par-ticipants than the unity for which the new leader of the party was pleading.

So much for that angle of the conven-

Another disturbing factor which will tend to render the pathway to unity still more difficult and perhaps impossible is that the wife of the newly elected leader refuses to be called by her legal married name and will retain her maiden name of McTeer and that "society will have to live with it," unorthodox as it may be

An intense controversy is still raging over the self-assumed status of the wife of our prime minister in spite of "noblesse oblige." It seems as if the Progress Conservative party may be split by another such incident

I wish the new leader all the luck in the world, but how can we hope for unity if unity is lacking at the source?

It is not my intention or wish to spark any controversy on this subject, or to criticize any lifestyle adopted by any other Canadian citizen. I am only suggesting that before embarking on an intensive campaign for unity within a political party, one should take great care one's own house is in order.-David A. Seaker,

'Socialitus'

One thing I have discovered about the new Socred government is its availability to citizens. There are no more private numbers or answering services as with the previous socialist government. One minister I sympathize with is Bill-Vander Zalm whose task must surely be to save a few millions of the taxpayers money by dismantling, or at least reducing, the called resources boards across the province. There is absolutely no reason why all of the so-called services of these boards cannot be handled through the human resources department. Crossing the Age Barrier

My father said: "You do realize that there's no future in this relationship, don't you?" But I said: "If I only get 10 happy years with Ron it's worth while." Thus Jessie, a humorous and pretty widow in her late 40s, now married to the engineer 17 years younger than she is. Eight of the 10 years are gone, and so far things are go-

Her optimism isn't so unusual, these days. Now that a husband is no longer expected to be boss and God as well, a lot of people have wondered why on earth he has to be older; women the warry marrying men younger than themselves point out not only that men died earlier, so a woman with a younger husband has less chance of being left a widow, but that, if a woman is supposed to reach her sexual peak later than a man, a younger husband will catch were any priorities toward which he would work in his dual portfolio. It appeared that most of his thoughts will be directed toward economic Of course there have always been odd cases of women marrying younger men — Josephine was older than Napoleon, Raymond Chandler adored a wife 20 years older than himself. And the tradition of a Broadly speaking, development policies must show how the people of the province will benefit by them, Phillips said.

He put top priority on restoryoung man having a formative affaire with a lady of a certain age has been almost respectable, from Rosenkavalier to Cheri never mind Benjamin Franklin, and his advice to a young man: "better to make an old woman happy than a young one miserable"). But seriously settling in with a younger man — that's a very different keting confidence in the "The people had faith in Social Credit (prior to 1972)

Of these fish we took, as they say in Whitehall, a wide trawl. Jessie's was one of the biggest gaps, and it was easy to see how the relationship developed; she was comfortable in home and body and cooks like an angel, he was living in the messand-bedspace collective of an RAF base; "You're well in there, mate," commented the Sergeants' mess — who didn't think it odd when he married her, either. The only thing that drives Ron wild now is Jessie fretting about the girls he meets at work: an older woman's jealousy may be more understandable, but it could be more destructive than the girls themselves.

Much more common were marriages where there was only a few years' dif-ference, and at first it looked as if the gap was simply an irrelevance. It was in any case hard to tease the single thread of age hard to distinguish the age factor from, say, the fact that one girl had been her lover's boss; hard to sort out a woman's fear of growing old faster than her hus-band, from her fear of simply growing old. But as the relationships unravelled, it did seem that age often was a factor in the balance of satisfied needs that makes a successful pair.

Christine, for example, an independent 37-year-old. publisher, had been driven frantic by an earlier mate with very trad ideas about women; she found in 30-year-old Alex an entirely more liberated, not to say more up to date, view of how men and women relate to each other. And Alex, for his part, had earlier escaped from a marriage where he felt he was being pressured against his bent; a younger dependent woman expected him to do paterfamilias things: win bread, breed babies, hang a By KATHARINE WHITEHORN London Observer mortgage around his neck. The age difference between Alex and Chris seems a part of the freedom they enjoy.

Most of the women I talked to admitted to a fair degree of what their husbands cal-led bossiness (Not that we made any comparison with other wives — maybe they're all bossy?); and they were apt to say that their men were lazy enough to like it. In most case, shough, there didn't seem to be any read doubt that the men could put their foot down — if things really seemed to warrant the effort of taking them off the

One expects someone who is older to have less energy than the mad, gadabout young; and I had thought I would find several instances of a sit-by-the-fire wife holding her husband back. But rather it seemed the other way round. "I dont't think my husband would care if he never met anybody," said one wife. "But once I get to a party I want to stay all night." Another such was Nona, a delightful Trinidadian girl propelled into the wastes of East Anglia by her bearded and steady teacher husband; she'd had a fine independent time gadding round the world before she married. "But I had the sense to know I shouldn't marry someone like myself."
It was she who made the point that if you marry late (she was 31), it's likely you'll marry younger "because who is there? Divorced men, other women's husbands or someone younger." Six years later, at 37, she certainly doesn't look her age; in fact plenty of the women felt they didn't.

When Women Marry Younger man

Yet one wife said ruefully: "Somehow a healthy middle-aged man strips quite at tractively, while a healthy middle-aged woman does not really.

"Sometimes I wish we could put on bodies to match our state of mind." And another said: "Knowing you are older keeps you up to the mark; I make damned sure my five ft. eight in. frame never gets above 140 pounds." This woman, Maria, has the theory that truly happy couples never notice change in each other: "When Mother died Father threw out all recent photographs of her saving very firmly photographs of her, saying very firmly. "She didn't look like that." A comforting theory — but she is wise not to bank on it.

Hers is a particularly interesting story as she married, when she was a divorcee of 42, a desperate 20-year-old refugee from Hungary: "Stefan didn't need a mother, but he did desperately need emotional security." In the years they've been together, the discrepancies have ironed out; his English is now perfect, his salary up to hers, his status as a lecturer irreproachable. As a friend put it, "When we had doubts about your marriage none of us ever expected Stefan to subside so quickly into middle age." But as she said:

"When you have seen the Germans king your grandfather and the Russians kill your grandiather and the Russians kill your uncle, when you have had your best friend die beside you and swum an icy river to freedom with someone else's child on your back, you have left your youth behind you." In emotional age, perhaps, (they were never far apart.

I asked about the importance of Mother in these relationships. "Well, if he's looking for his mother, he's disappointed," said one tartly; and overall I met scant patience for the view that anyone marrying a girl who's older is seeking but the womb and the nipple. Mother was more a tangible problem as a good old-fashioned In Law; fear that My Boy was being sucked in by an over-experienced adven-turess lending respectability to a mother's natural reluctance to let go. One man did say that as his mother had been away with TB during much of his childhood. "I may be a bit short on mumliness." He, in any case, adores only women with children, loves dropping into a ready-made family, enjoys being all chaps together with his girl friend's sons. "Not father, as I'm still on the downy side of 30." This man is enjoying his relationship, at 29, with a 43-year-old divorcee a lot more than he did the one he had at 20 with a woman of 30: "Then, I tion, I was always trying to assert my gruff-voiced maleness; I'd had three years out of the nest, she'd had 13. Now we've all been married, we've all had gaudy nights, we've all travelled abroad.

And there were sadnesses: in one mar-riage a man's friends all had younger girl friends with whom his school-teacher wife had little in common; the couple now see only her, older, circle. A 20-year-old who now willingly lets a 35-yearold social worker run his life, wonders gloomily how he'll feel about it when he's 40. And then there was the very much older woman married for the third time who said: "I am prepared for my husband to find a younger woman, later if not sooner . . . if he wants out it is fairer to all to let it happen, as I cannot really expect to keep him although I'll do my damnedest to, forever,

In the comfortable, cheery middle aged marriages that I saw, however, the women seemed no more vulnerable than any others of a certain age: their men seemed just about to have forgotten that an age difference existed. Perhaps they had not been too calendar conscious in the first place; certainly they didn't seem to have anything to regret: the women seemed younger, more vital than many others of their age. Indeed, I almost wondered if the one snag might be that if the men were keeping the women young what was there to keep the husbands feeling spry?

And for the very young men, the future is simply unknown. Plainly there are more is simply unknown. men don't need to say "Alas, when she is 60 I will be a mere stripling of 53." Only how many men ever do envisage being married to a woman of 60, whatever age they expect to be themsleves? I would guess, thank heaven, pretty few.

It should have been passed last year but was delayed by lack of authorizing legislation, which in turn was held up waiting for an administration request to implement the Sinai agreement.

Titles Galore: How About A Tiger for City Teams

The weekend in review, and Victoria really has it pretty good when its overall athletic prowess is recalled. Or hadn't all ye of little faith noted what has been going on recently.

First, take basketball.

Not only does the university of Victoria have an unbeaten club in its Vikettes in the Canada West women's competitive way of things, but Mike Gallo's group should be odds-on to take the national crown as well. This would be a second for Mike who is making quite a name for himself as a women's

Then, of course, there are the Scorpions. This Victoria team is the champion of the Dogwood Senior "A" Men's Legue for the second straight season; and although a game down to Vancouver A's in the best-of-three playoffs for the B.C. title, don't discount this club's chances. The second and third games of the playdowns will take place here on the weekend and, although in this class of competition, the home floor means little, the Scorpions figure to bounce back, for two very important reasons.

First, the playoff game in Vancouver on Sunday was the Scorpions' first real test in over four weeks since the league schedule ended. It gave them a good shakedown and the fact that we're closing fast at the finish against the A's may mean they are ready to hit their true stride at home.

It is to be hoped so, because that is where the major prize comes to the fore.

that the Scorpions will be right there when the first centre jump takes place. 'They'd better be," he said recently.

So this weekend will tell the tale and it would be nice to see the old Uvic gymn bulging for the occasion; and then, hopefully on to the nationals. hopefully on to the nationals.

Still on basketball, what about Home Lumber? Here's a club that has quetly done its job all winter, with little fanfair, but with a tremendous record. Jack Lusk has put together a good club and with the rule allowing him to bolster the team with mainland stars, the possibility of a national championship for his club is definitely within reason.

This is an experienced team and not without its galaxy of international stars. Mary Coutts, Angie Doble, Wendy Grant, Dot Freshy make a rectest light property tracks a rectest light property tracks.

Dot Freethy make a potent lineup anywhere and it just could be that Victoria, in its Vikettes and Lumberettes, may be one, two, in whatever order in the entire country. Only time will tell, naturally, but with Vancouver long being the hothed of women's basketball, and Victoria ending that reign this season, don't bet against a court double for the gals.

But then, this is the year of the team, isn't it? Last summer, it will be recalled that London Boxing Club, which really did not have major competition all year, surprised every-one by not only winning provincial honors but by then going all the way to give the city its first-ever Dominion football made their annual bid for a share of the glory. And connected. The Bates won a big invitational in Hull in mid season, then returned to the east and Oshawa to take the Canadian title, land, when Bates won a share of the world softball cham-pionship in a tournament that wasn't concluded because of bad weather. In Victoria, we like to think it was the biggest piece of the cup that belongs to Bates because they won the round-robin. But rules being what they were, a three-way tie was declared. Still, Bates are No. 1, and in the world; and

* Not to be outdone. Bate softballers that same summer

No, I haven't forgotten the rugby lads. And the Victoria Crimson Tide again won the McKechnie Cup, emblematic of rugby sumpremacy in the province; and James Bay is still supreme in the club category as well.

supreme in the club category as well.

Don't forget the youngsters either. And again with basketball, there are the Vic High Tigers, defending champions of the girls provincial basketball kingdom, and mighty Oak Bay, unbeaten in boys league play here this season, shooting for yet another high school title, ranked No, 2 in the province, and maybe about ready to be called No. 1 again. Incidentally the Lower Island tournament starts on Thursday.

So come on Victoria, you've never had it so good; and that doesn't include the starry list of individual stars who help make these clubs click and make a name for the city on other endeavours.

Titles galore? This could be a banner year.

Executives, Players Ready for New Season

The British Columbia Golf Association's 1976 tournament calendar is in the hands of the printers, and that means summer can't be far away.

For Victoria, the season officially begins March 20 with the City Intermediate championship. The 36-hole event for players between 19 and 25, starts at Victoria Golf Club and winds up the following day (March 21) at Glen Meadows.

There's been one interesting late addition but the highlight of the year will come in August (25-28) with the Willingdon Cup matches and Canadian Amateur at Royal Colwood.

Another national event gives us reason to feel flattered. The men's show at Colwood will be the sixth national tournament to come to the district in the past 13 years. Or five in ament to come to the district in the past 13 years.

The men's show at Colwood will be the sixth national tournament to come to the district in the past 13 years. Or five in the last nine years, if that makes you feel busier.

During the busy stretch since 1963, the 1967 Commonwealth matches and the 1966 U.S. National Lefthanders' tournament provided international extras.

The flood of big events doesn't mean a thing except that a number of district executives have worked like beavers for the past 13 years, and that the Royal Canadian Golf Association consistently has appreciated Victoria's efforts.

Feel flattered, guys.

Feel flattered, guys.

The late extra on the BCGA calendar is the B.C. Invitational, the important, final test that determines the makeup of the provincial Willingdon Cup team. Uplands get the first round on July 17 and Colwood the second on July 18.

Influencing the BCGA brass in awarding the tournament to Victoria was the national tournament. By playing Colwood in July, the Willingdon Cup team will get a chance to become better acquainted with the course.

Good thinking, guys.

Before the season starts, however, there's executive homework to clear up. Much of it accomplished Monday night at the annual meeting of the Victoria District Commit-

The entire slate of officers was quickly returned. That means Colwood's Gord Millin is back for his second term as president, Bob Bell of Uplands returns as vice-president, Leo Derman of Gorge Vale as secretary and Bob Peters of Colwood's treasurer.

Derek Rhys-Jones remains as buttons chairman and Eric Wright added junior development to his duties as chairman of the Willie Park Driver competition, Highlight of Monday's meeting was the adoption of a revised constitution, modernized and streamlined by Viv Hicks of Uplands.

SHORT CHIPS: Jim Nelford, reigning provincial and Canadian champion who should "look good" on the B.C. team this year, is having a great run in U.S. college tournaments ... Nelford and teammate Mike Reid tied for the individual championship Saturday to lead Brigham Young to victory in the Pacific Coast Intercollegiate tournament at Riverside, Calif. ... Nelford was the low man two weeks earlier ... Former Uplands assistant Brian Carbery, who went to Florida to play the winter circuit, came back with a bride ... Carbery will be moving over to team up with Al Kennedy in the Quilchena pro shop ... Also on the move, and vowing that Uplands will win the Willie Park Driver without a sweat, is Gord Rands ... His membership application has finally been approved ...

Park's Knee New Worry For Bruins

BOSTON (AP) - Harry Sinden, general manager of Boston Bruins of the National Hockey League, has denied reports that all-star defence-man Brad Park may require knee surgery.

Park, who came to the Bruins from New York Rangers in a trade involving Phil Esposito and Carol Vad-nais, injured his left knee when his skate caught in a rut in a game against New York Islanders on Feb. 21.

Coach Don Cherry said he didn't know about surgery. "I know his knee hurts, but I didn't hear anything about any operation."

No Choice In Story That Led To Suicide -Paper

DALLAS - Officials of the Dallas Times Herald say the newspaper hadeno choice but to publish a story naming a former petroleum engineer as a Soviet spy, despite the man's threat to kill himself if the report was printed.

Norman Rees, 69, was found thot to death in his home in Southbury, Conn., soon after the Times Herald published a copyrighted story saying Rees divulged U.S. oil secrets to the Soviets beginning with the Second World War.

Rees had asked the paper not to publish the story and hot to identify him, according to Times Herald spokesmen. "On Saturday afternoon, just hours prior to publication, Rees telephoned the Times Herald and asked if the story was going to be printed and would he be identified. When he was told that he would be identified, he said that such a disclosure left him no choice but to commit suicide," the statement said.

"From time to time news papers receive threats about stories from people attempt-ing to protect their identities. If in our judgment a story is newsworthy and supported by the facts, it is our policy to publish. In this instance, it was decided that the story could not be suppressed, even if the face of Rees' threat," said executive editor Ken the force in his children when they obviously went out of their way to ding him for a $35 fine.

Ken Rillie, 4061 Larchwood, has a beef against zealous Saanich police who gave him a ticket at 1 a.m. Monday for not having 1976 licence plates on his parked van.

First of all, he said, his truck did have new plates: they were locked up inside having been bought Feb. 24 by his bother-in-law while Ken was out of town on his contract driving job with Vancouver Island Coach Lines.

Rillie got back to Victoria at about midnight Súnday, thinking he had plenty of time to attach the new plates before using the truck Monday, morning.

In fact, he had put the plates on before noticing the ticket in his windshield. Time on the ticket: 1 a.m., and furthermore, Rillie lives on a quiet cul-de-sac.

Such "skulking in the night" isn't likely to breed much respect for the law, he commented.

When he complained to police all he got was an unsympathetic, "That's tough," even though Vancouver police were allowing a week's grace for parked vehicles to comply.

As she was leaving she told Amy the clerk had made a $2 error in adding up the three insurance bills.

Amy didn't even bother checking the figures. He reached into his pocket and handed her a $2 bill.

"Now, that's service," she said with a smile.

Mr. Justice R. A. Wootton formally retired at the end of February and no replacement has been announced. The association has made "very strong representations" to have a replacement appointed but a decision does not appear likely for several months.

The bar association at that time, in welcoming Wootton's appointment, said "this puts an end to all the rumors that Victoria was no longer to have a judge of the Supreme Court of British Columbia residing here."

Now, with Wootton's retirement and no replacement, association president Dr. J. J. Gow says "this bar is doing everything in its power" to see Victoria isn't left without a Supreme Court judge.

One of the beauties of a home bakery is 'that you don't need a heck of a lot of equipment to get started — just a stove, a few pans, some ingredients and that "special" recipe. Whatever else you feel you need, don't forget to check the thrift stores for secondhand items.

When you operate a family-sized home business, you quickly realize that there's no one to pass the buck to when you goof something up. You alone are responsible for any slipshod 'work. If you expect your enterprise to grow and thrive, you're well advised to set high standards for your-self and to constantly make every effort you can to exceed

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

Numerous occasions arise, especially in duplicate bridge, in which one voluntarily makes a sacrifice bid against the adversaries' game or slam contract. The hope in sacrificing is, of course, that fewer points will be lost than could have been made by the opponents if the latter had been permitted to play their game or slam contract.

At times, the sacrifice bid boomerangs, for the bidders lose more points than the op-and South, respectively, were Helen and Bob Blakey, of Co-lumbia, Md.

North's jump to two notrump was the unusual notrump bid, showing a two-suited hand in the minor suits (at least five diamonds and five clubs). Over East's four-heart hid Blakey made the sacriclubs). Over East's four-heart bid, Blakey made the sacrifice call of five diamonds. West then showed his heart support, and when the bidding reverted to South, he felt that East-West could make their contract. So once again, he trotted out a sacrificial, non-vulnerable bid in diamonds, six diamonds this time. West, quite naturally doubled.

West got off to the unfortunate-for-his side lead of the heart ace which was ruffed in dummy. The king and ace of trumps were cashed next, gathering in the outstanding pieces. On the second trump lead West made a most costly discard — he tossed away the three of clubs.

discard — he tossed away the three of clubs.

South next laid down his queen of clubs, West taking it with the ace, with East discarding a heart. Belatedly, West shifted to a spade, dummy's ace winning. The South hand was then entered via the trump queen, and the ten of clubs laid down, with the marked finesse being taken against West's jack. Declarer now led his remaining club, with dummy's nine being finesses. On the king and eight of clubs, South discarded his two losing spades.

Thus, thanks to the opponents, the sacrificial six-diamond contract was fulfilled.

Roust Those Under-Gardeners Out

when a mixture of rain and snow is being dashed against the windows by a chilly southwest wind as February makes its exit, the best past-time I know is reading a good anadoring back withinked gardening book published somewhere in the middle of the last century.

One I came across recently is a guide to "head gar-deners", a class to which I feel we all belong, or should belong but I'm a little doubt-ful as to where we find the under-gardeners and young apprentices who are supposed apprentices who are supposed to do the work.

Here are a few interesting quotes, amusing in a way, but likely to trigger an idea to fill the next burst of sunshine. the next burst of sunshine.

Quoting: A look around theflower garden in early March is apt to be a little disappointing, especially if the season be backward, but the growing plants with a hand lork.

End of quote.

Apparently it is a very simple task to lick the garden into shape in early March. All we "head gardeners" have to do is to rout the under-gardeners and apprentices from the boiler-room and put them sheltered corners of the gar-den, but no workers have so appear, we shall possibly be further ahead if we attend to a few of these jobs ourselves. After all, the head gardener was always a worker

A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1-IT'S BEST to starf your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room, etc., for renf, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2-BE CLEAR, Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information, Always include the price in your advertisement.

3-MAKE IT EASY for the readerprospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with 4-RLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop-your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

ADVERTISERS 1. 11/4(6=8

· I DON'T KNOW. WHAT DO YOU MEAN -"DO I HAVE AN IMAGE?"

A good advertising image is a mental picture that reflects the kind of merchandise or service being offered for sale. For example: A quality furniture store should LOOK like a quality furniture store not a bargain hunter's paradise. And a budget priced store should always look like what it IS — so that it attracts the kind of people who are look ing for the kind of merchandise it sells.

YOU MEAN THE RITZ SHOULDN'T LOOK LIKE JOE'S DINER?

That's exactly what we mean. And Joe's Diner shouldn't look like The Ritz either.

· HOW DO I GET AN IMAGE?

Well, first, you decide what kind of store you are — what sort of people you're appear ing to, and then you design all your advertising to fit. You stick to the same style, so that people recognize your ad as YOURS as soon as they see it.

WHAT'S THE ADVANTAGE?

Well, like we said — you attract the right kind of customer to begin with. You're not going to sell a $900 dining suite to someone who's looking for a 79.95 kitchen set anyway, so why waste your advertising dollars? And people who want elegant dining facilities are going to be disappointed if all you serve is chili-burgers for 1.69

Yes. By seeing your company advertise in a consistent manner, the public learns to gain confidence in YOUR firm. It establishes YOU in the mind of the people as a reliable, ongoing firm that knows its business — one that is going to be there to stand behind what it sells for years to come.

BUT I DON'T KNOW ANYTHING ABOUT DESIGNING

That's what your two daily newspapers can do for you. We have a team of sales people who've been in the business a long time. They are trained to advise you on your budget. And, backing them up, is a team of artists and copy-writers who are trained to design an advertising campaign that will reflect your image and up your profits by increasing your business at a sure, steady rate.

WHAT IS AN ADVERTISING CAMPAIGN ANYWAY?

That's a planned series of advertisements designed to do a specific job. It's the only way to advertise effectively. You establish your goals; our account representative brings them to the creative people, who work out the best way to reach your target. They use their imagination and their knowhow to think up something especially for you.

HOW DO I KNOW I'LL LIKE IT?

You're given an artist's rough of your ad campaign so you can discuss it with others in your firm, and with your account rep. before you start the series. And re-vamp if necessary. Then, you get proofs of your ads after they've been typeset and the art is in

HOW DO I KNOW I CAN AFFORD IT?

Because your account rep. knows your business; he knows what your advertising budget should be, based on your volume and what your cost-to-sell figures should be. So, when the creative department designs your ads, these figures are borne in mind so that the amount of space you buy fits in with what you can afford.

BUT ISN'T IT EXPENSIVE TO HAVE THIS SPECIAL TREATMENT?

It costs no more than just buying space. Our creative team has books and books of headings, borders, drawings, sketches, and many different type styles to utilize. They are creative people who can put these things to good use for your benefit at no extra charge. They'll make up a series of ads that reflect the image you want to create, so that your ads are YOURS and YOURS ALONE.

lighted by a reprimand to one of the accused from Judge Leslie F. Cashman.

Robert Joseph Gelineau and Gordon Norman Comley chose a jury trial, with the latter defending himself against the charge of armed robbery at the Gorge shopping centre liquor store last April 12.

The first and only witness Monday was Saanich police identification officer Cpl. Norman M. Ellison, who said he lifted fingerprints from a car parked at 1211 Alderman at 1:30 a.m. April 13.

Comley asked if there had been more than one identifiable print on the car and Ellison said only one imprints of a thumb and a partial fin-gerprint were found. The par-tial print was not identifiable, the policeman said. The other matched Comley's right

The judge spoke sharply to Comley when, after three cau-tions for interrupting the tions for interruping the judge and the witness, the ac-cused suggested to Ellison there had been no effort made to trace the partial print. He did not allow time for the policeman to answer.

Cashman instructed Comley to let the witness answer; he would get an opportunity later to make a submission to the jury, the judge said.

The strike is the fifth to hit the provincially-owned railway in the past 2½ years.

Involving close to 300 truck drivers, warehousemen and office employees, the walkout occurred following the collapse of last-ditch negotiations to avert a strike.

"There was no feeling for the people in the northern areas who depend on the BCR, no concern for the citizens of the province," Zimmerman said.

Ottawa's announcement that it will scrap the export levy is another example of how the whole anti-inflation program was thrown together in haste with little thought for the future. Under terms of the proposed expert tax levy, companies covered by wage and price guidelines were allowed profits on export sales of only 95 per cent of their average profit over the previous five years. Excess profits would have been subject to the new tax, although rebates could be offered if profits were reinvested in approved projects within Canada.

The export tax had been proposed with good intentions. Theoretically it would have kept the price of Canadian products down on international markets. Conversely it would not have allowed exporting businesses to escape restraints imposed on companies selling on domestic markets. Then provincial governments and crownowned utilities began borrowing huge amounts on international markets, driving the price of the Canadian dollar up abroad. A world-wide recession saw Canada drop from a $2 billion trade surplus in 1972 to a meagre $472 million surplus in 1974 and a predicted $5 billion loss in 1975. Clearly, it

Canadian export trade.

Columbia's logging and mining industries were particularly hard hit. It Z lobbying, especially from B.C. and Alberta, played a large part in scrapping the proposed law. At the same time removing this cog from the AIB wheel results in new inequities. Employees of large export firms have their salaries limited by federal law, while there is no control on company profits earned from export trade. Other companies, perhaps divisions of the same companies, will find different sets of rules applying to sales depending on whether the product is sold at home or abroad. Canadian customers may end up paying world prices for some commodities, such as copper which is not controlled. In other cases domestic shortages may occur because companies can reap larger profits on international markets.

One doesn't need a crystal ball to see the potential here for horrendous domestic inflation. Raw and manufactured products will automatically be diverted to the higher priced international market, leaving the folks at home to bid up a scarce supply. Nor wasn't the time to put constraints on does the government have any mechanism to stop companies from Cyclical industries such as British serving international markets at the expense of the national economy Finance Minister Donald Macdonald said the government would take action to stop the diversion of goods. However, this would entail the unusual step of putting quotas on all exports. This would damage Canada's international trade even further, leaving an impression abroad that Canadian supplies were subject to political

> As ridiculous as it reads, the Anti Inflation Board is in the position of encouraging a policy that has a strong potential of furthering inflation. If the export levy tax had stood some province's notably our own might not have signed up with the federal guidelines. Ottawa has chosen what it considers the lesser of two evils. No matter what the exceptions, rule changes or flip flops, it is the wage earner who continues to pay the price. We have been waiting for more than six months to see the price controls in place. Instead, the only thing that remains in place is Jean Luc Pepin's grin. It is beginning to look very lop-

true to form, adding another businessman to the tight little board of directors who control the city. Business expertise is necessary on any council. One must always add that obligatory little sentence, because the intertwining of business and all levels of government has become something of a North American shibboleth. In truth we can't say what a council of labor union types or philosophers, or teachers might be like because none

Of course, a uniform council wouldn't be a healthy thing, would it? All those labor union people, all those philosophers, might lead us down some strange paths. What we need is a diversified vigorous council reflecting the concerns of this community. Rhetoric and reality don't match.

First of all there's the mayor, a

Last Saturday's city byelection ran lawyer. Running down the aldermanic list, we find a retired army colonel. The rest are businessmen. Robert Ellis is a developer, Ron Mackenzie owns an office supply outfit; Bob Wright owns a large scale tourist attraction, Helen Biernes is a former chamber of commerce president, Murray Glazier, a consulting engineer; Bill Tindall, manager of the Better Business Bureau which is paid for by the subscriptions of local business, and now John Hayes, a property developer.

Let us look at where these good folk live. Four addresses, including that of the mayor and council's newest addition, John Hayes, live in the Rockland area. Oak Bay and Beach Drive each account for two more alderpersons. Another lives in Uplands. Where are the people representing Fairfield, Victoria West It must be said: Victoria city council is largely controlled by business people who live in the wealthier areas of the city. No wonder Bob Wright is shocked when he spends an evening with the Victoria city police on the street. A social, cultural and occupational bias is within all of us. That is why we all pay so much lip service to diversified elected bodies in our democratic rhetoric.

Yet lip service it remains. Victoria city council is a living example to that. This is not meant to disparage the excellent talents that exist among our city councillors. It is simply a matter of stating an obvious fact the city's government is not representative of its people. That alone should make us stop and think before the next municipal election roles along. With so many potential conflicts of interest over land deals, the day may come when this council couldn't summon a quorum to vote on an issue.

Media Mob Much Maligned

OTTAWA — The applause started in his own section but instantly thundered right around the hall.

The Liberals invented Pierre Trudeau," declared Heward Grafftey, the engaging elfin Quebec MP. A pause for effect. A fist banged down on to the podium for punctuation,. "And the CBC packaged him.

Among delegates to the Conservative leadership convention, media-bashing was as popular as Trudeau

Witless bastards," "Vultures," "freaks," delegates said to each other about the media mobs — until they noticed me standing, head cocked close behind. 'Have you no decency?" Bennett Horner shouted at the reporters who enveloped his brother Jack Horner while he tried to make his agonizing, and in its result, support to Quebecker Claude Wagner.

It's Anti-French

These sentiments, if expressed more honestly than is common, are not new. Nor are they misplaced. Television warped the convention into its own image Polls reported by CBC and by CTV and, earlier, by Toronto Star, for example, may have cost Brian Mulroney his chances. They made him, inaccurately as events proved, seem to be the front-runner and so the target for all of the other can-

Neither is it new that television per formed as the convention's central nervous system. Candidates announced their decisions to the television microphones the networks then relayed the news back into the convention hall to the other candidates. One delegate, English-speaking, switched from Joe Clark to Wagner on the last ballot because he had phoned home to a sick wife and she told him:

French.

The difference, which Grafftey and Bennett Horner and the delegates could not recognize because, like fish in water they were part of it, was that the convention itself was neither a political event nor a televised reflection of that event, but a environment" to use the phrase coined by the later Walter Lippman, in which me and politics fuse to invent each other and to package each other.

In a pseudo-environment; the abnormal becomes the normal. After his victory, Clark went, as do all new leaders, im-mediately to the television booth to be interviewed. There, a first as much in jour-nalism as in politics, Clark was questioned by the CBC's convention commentators: John Bassett, an ex-Conservative candidate and party bigwig and Eddie Goodman, former party national president and, during the time he was outside the booth, a key worker for rival candidate Flora MacDonald.

The Medium created its own political messages. As a relief from interviewing delegates, CBC star Larry Zolf interviewed CBC star Charlotte Gobiel. She told him that Mulroney had told her he opposed "gang-bags."

The message created their own medium. In his set speech, candidate Paul Hellyer also took a swipe at the press. The next day, ex-candidate Hellyer returned to the parliamentary press gallery to resume his career as columnist Hellyer.

It does contain infinite possibilities. Clark, a pragmatic politician and a former journalist, understands the phenomenon perfectly. Would he have dificulties because he was completely unknown, a reporter asked after his victory?

'You fellows work on the star tem," Clark answered with a shrug. "You paid no attention to me as an MP. Publicity, and notoriety perhaps, come automatically to whoever is opposition

Clark is absolutely right. Within a few weeks he will be as well-known to Canadians as was Robert Stanfield after eight television-blighted years on the job. Media magic already envelopes Clark's wife Maureen, though she in fact has the substance of an extraordinarily poised and clear minded 23-year-old.

Tele-politics, mind you, encompasses more than just television and politics. The print media swim inside the same pseudo

After the second ballot, a reporter for a medium-sized daily newspaper hurried past me out of the hall. "I think Clark's go-ing to make it," he explained. Union Greed

The first time I ever attended a labor meeting was in Saskatoon during the 1930s. The meeting was called to try and get a number of labor unions organized, such as miners, carpenters, bricklayers. people in attendance were of many and varied political persuasion and national origins. There were all there for the one common purpose - to obtain a de-

Today unionized labor has gained raises in pay that stagger the imagination and have gone from a mere 20 cents an hour to the not uncommon figure of $12 an hour. This has to be an ego trip of un précedented proportions. Organized-labor has become powerful but their power is not matched by a social conscience. No consideration has been given by organized labor to unorganized workers, the un-employed, the unemployable, pensioners, aged widows or the handicapped.

The leaders of organized labor have failed dismally in their mission and responsibility to society, mostly because their greed oriented-minds cannot com-prehend what is in the interests of our nation and its people, or what is best for labor in the long run. Only an idiot believes that we can continue to have a spiralling inflation without ultimate disaster. Organized labor has done nothing to try and help achieve an equitable income for all Canadians, even though it has the power to force the issue.

At this critical time while our elected leaders are trying to do something about the economy, we find organized labor acting like ignorant boors. There surely are some members of our unions who use their heads for reasons other than to hold their ears apart. The labor movement is verful enough to force a hold on prices and wages, and if they wanted to could force a roll back of both. All that is necessary is leadership and a will to succeed.-Si Poth, Chilliwack, B.C.

Divided House?

I followed with some interest the proceedings of the recent Progressive Conservative convention.

During the final stage of the voting I and apparently vigorous leader such as Joseph Clark might assist in binding together what, for some considerable period of time has been a somewhat divided party, into a cohesive force which could tend to overthrow the present Liberal administration. However, it appeared to me that Clark's fervent appeal for unity in his acceptance address was falling on deaf ears in some quarters and that the convention closed on a somewhat discordant level, also that nothing was further from the minds of some of the paripants than the unity for which the new leader of the party was pleading.

So much for that angle of the conven-

Another disturbing factor which will tend to render the pathway to unity still more difficult and perhaps impossible is that the wife of the newly elected leader refuses to be called by her legal married name and will retain her maiden name of McTeer and that "society will have to live with it," unorthodox as it may be.

An intense controversy is still raging over the self-assumed status of the wife of our prime minister in spite of "noblesse oblige." It seems as if the Progressive Conservative party may be split by another such incident.

I wish the new leader all the luck in the world, but how can we hope for unity if unity is lacking at the source?

It is not my intention or wish to spark any controversy on this subject, or to criticize any lifestyle adopted by any other Canadian citizen. I am only suggesting that before embarking on an intensive campaign for unity within a political party, one should take great care one's own house is in order.—David A. Seaker, 1725 Cedar Hill X Road

'Socialitus'

One thing I have discovered about the new Socred government is its availability to citizens. There are no more private numbers or answering services as with the previous socialist government. One minister I sympathize with is Bill Vander Zalm whose task must surely be to save a few millions of the taxpayers money by dismantling, or at least reducing, the so called resources boards across the why all of the so-called services of these human resources department. If we block off some of the rip-off artists in the welfare department and start issuing a few shovels, this province might eventually recover from its dose of "socialitus." Gary W. Cheap Politics

The decision of former premier Dave Barrett to continue to play an active role in British Columbia politics by contesting Vancouver East is one that will surely benefit the province and the people of this province. He complained it was difficult for him to Instil respect for the force in his children when they obviously went out of their way to ding him for a $35 fine.

First of all, he said, his truck did have new plates: they were locked up inside having been bought Feb. 24 by his bother-in-law while Ken was out of town on his contract driving job with Vancouver Island Coach Lines.

Rillie got back to Victoria at about midnight Sunday, think-ing he had plenty of time to attach the new plates before using the work Monday morning.

In fact, he had put the plates on before noticing the ticket in his windshield. Time on the ticket: 1 a.m., and furthermore,

Such "skulking in the night" isn't likely to breed much respect for the law, he commented.

When he complained to police all he got was an unsympathetic, "That's tough," even though Vancouver police were allowing a week's grace for parked vehicles to comply.

At noon Friday a reporter contacted Geoffrey Amy, manager of the motor-vehicle licence issuing office. He was shocked. There'd been some misunderstanding, he said.

Within two hours the problem had been rectified and Mrs. Green got her $158 back — in cash.

As she was leaving she told Amy the clerk had made a $2

Amy didn't even bother checking the figures. He reached into his pocket and handed her a $2 bill.

Now, that's service," she said with a smile. * * *

committee, Ald. Bob Wright, said the plan will be ac-complished through re-routing, removing certain "plugs" that now impede traffic and parking restrictions to ease traffic flows in peak hours.

The prime purpose is to provide better access to the downtown area and a smoother flow of traffic to and from the Legislative Buildings area for civil servants, he said. Wright said the present conestion at Yates and Govern-ment "has got to be the biggest problem we have in the whole city."

He said the new liquor store-on Yates is turning out to be what council had feared, a traffic generator.

And this compounds the other problems caused by the varying of overhead wires, sidewalk widening on Yates, Hydro utility projects and the new mall, he added.

Wright said up to now the "thou shalt not" principle and the philosophy now is to "try to discourage them from going through rather than preventing them."

He said although some of the restrictions at Govern-ment and Wharf will be removed under the plan the northbourd flow on Government won't have synchronized traffic lights so anyone using that route for through traffic when the other options are open on Douglas and Blan-shard would be "a nut," deserving no sympathy.

Widening Wharf Street to four lanes by reducing sidewalk widths is a cornerstone in the plan, Wright said, and engineering problems may be involved in the re-alignment of the Wharf-Government in-tersection. No cost estimates were available, but city engi-neer John Sansom said per-manent reconstruction of the street could cost up to Wright said he is fairly con-

Lots and lots, of people ask us if (besides ours, of course!) there are books on houseplants we could recommend. There are several, but one of our particular favorites is "The After Dinner Gardening Book" by Richard W. Langer. To quote from its cover:

CHICAGO GRAIN

CHICAGO (AP) -- Profittaking, the possibility of abundant precipitation of winter wheat and a slowdown in export business combined to produce a bearish sentiment that sent grain futures prices skidding on the Board of London Metals

Wheat futures lost 16 cents a bushel, soybeans 9, corn 6 and oats 2½. Soybean meal declined nearly $2 a ton and soy oil lost 25 points, or ½4 cent a pound. Iced broilers were mixed, showing just a small gain and a smaller loss.

Domestic gold futures eased from 50 cents to about $1 an ounce in very slow trade.

The weakness in gold reflected a similar trend in spot gold prices abroad. Domestic silver futuras lost about 4 cents an ounce.

The decline was almost steady in wheat with greatest losses near the close. Com and oats generally followed the wheat moves, but profit-taking was a factor in corn as longs fell away. Some export business failed to materialize in the soybean complex and this factor, along with weakness in nearby pits and the profit-taking, com-bined to send prices sharply
